Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing with great interest to apply for the Development Effectiveness Specialist position within the Infrastructure and Energy Sector (INE), as advertised on the IDB careers website. With over 15 years of experience in applied economics and enhancing project performance throughout the entire project cycle, I am confident I possess the skills and expertise required to support the rollout of the new Development Effectiveness Framework and contribute to the success of the INE portfolio.

The role's focus on providing hands-on support to project teams is a perfect match for my background. As Director, Evaluation at the Millennium Challenge Corporation, I drove key elements of project design for multi-million dollar energy and infrastructure programs, collaborating directly with ministry counterparts to prepare logical frameworks, project terms, and reform agendas. I built on this by leading evaluation and learning initiatives across MCC's infrastructure portfolio, including the WASH, transport, and energy sectors. This work involved not only post-project evaluation but also supporting the upfront due diligence and economic analysis for various energy projects to ensure their alignment with development effectiveness principles from the start.

Beyond direct project work, I have extensive experience in the capacity building and knowledge management central to this role. I have designed and led training for internal and external audiences on evaluation methods and program design at MCC's "M&E College." Furthermore, I have a proven ability to curate and disseminate operational lessons, most notably through the "Principles into Practice" flagship report, which led to presentation requests from senior leadership at the IDB, World Bank, and USAID. My recent work at the Peace Corps creating agency-wide analytics dashboards further underscores my ability to build the tools necessary for effective, results-based management.

My deep technical expertise in development effectiveness, hands-on infrastructure sector experience, and fluency in Spanish, English, French, and Portuguese would allow me to integrate seamlessly into the INE team and begin adding value from day one.

Thank you for your time and consideration. My resume provides further detail on my qualifications, and I look forward to the opportunity to discuss how my experience can benefit the IDB's mission.

Sincerely,

Ryan A. Moore
